UNDERLYING FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

Global equities moved higher in December as it looked increasingly likely that a phase-one trade deal between the US and China was on the horizon. Investor appetite for risk continued in December as central banks retained an accommodative stance.

During the month, equity components were positive, except for the negative Asia ex Japan components. Fixed-income components were entirely negative. Within currencies, the British pound had mixed to negative performance relative to other major currencies. It weakened compared to the Brazilian real (a notable frontrunner during the month), Norwegian krone, New Zealand dollar, South African rand and Australian dollar. It was up against the US dollar, yen and Taiwan dollar.

Volatility Management

The volatility cap of the Fund is 5.5%. Market volatility remained subdued during December following the reduction in volatility over the past few months. Fund volatility followed a similar path, remaining low and stable throughout the month. Fund volatility never exceeded its volatility cap. As a result, the Fund was fully invested in the risky assets at December month end.
